

Chapter and Young Eagles Coronavirus Guidelines Update May 6, 2021

May 6, 2021 – Now that summer is upon us, and COVID vaccines are widely available in most areas, we hope you can enjoy your opportunities to fly, or engage in any level of aviation you enjoy. It is aviation that brings us together. EAA is continuing to monitor the situations across the country and answer questions regarding chapter and public events. Similar to businesses and other organizations, our EAA chapters and squadrons are in a re-opening process. As your chapter discusses the opportunity to re-engage we would like to again offer some updated guidance, as the situation will continue to evolve in different ways for different regions. Please follow CDC, state, and local regulations when planning a gathering. All people should become familiar with the CDC's suggested health precautions, communicate with your local public health officials (city, county, etc.). They will have the best overview on the local situation regarding public events. Many states are relaxing the restrictions on public gatherings as they participate in different phases of their respective reopening plan.

Many chapters are now holding monthly meetings and gatherings while incorporating a level of caution and discipline regarding personal protection and space. Participation in these events is completely voluntary. When reopening, please place health and safety first. Your chapter has a better gauge on the situation in your community than we here at EAA headquarters, so please decide accordingly when considering the types of events and the potential number of participants.
